Officers for the coming year will be installed.

Pep Club To Meet

The second meeting of the Pep Club was held Sept. 10. The purpose of the meeting was to elect officers and for the cheerleaders to teach the members new cheers. This year's officers are: president, Herbie Pulliam; vice-president, Donna Guill; Secretary, Suzanne Guill; Treasurer, Betty Anderson; Reporter, Jane Richardson.

The dues are 25 cents and are to be paid to Betty Anderson by the end of September. The money for the dues will go to pay for the annual page and for membership cards.

From Old Letter

Nurse Recalls Stay In Paris

Paris in the springtime, or Paris in the summer. It's always seemed beautiful to thousands of visitors. For Miss Rebecca Norman Anderson of Witt, Virginia — better known in Appomattox as Mrs. Pat Coleman, Paris was a most enchanting place. Mrs. Coleman, now a resident Hickory Grove Rest Home, was looking over some of her papers the other day and came upon a letter which she wrote August 10, 1918 near Paris where she was serving as a U. S. army nurse, World War I.

"We are very near the front," she wrote, explaining that the French people "have been at war so long they are now feeling it a great deal." As for the beauties of the French countryside, she wrote, "Why, I couldn't describe to you how beautiful it is."

Readers may be reminded of World War II blackouts in Miss Anderson's letter where she wrote, "We are very near the front, but I feel very little scare, though there are frequent air raids in Paris and around. We have very little light at night and carefully shaded."

Helped With Bloodmobile

Mrs. Coleman has for many years been a familiar sight at Bloodmobile time, using her nurse's training to be of assistance. A broken hip three years ago has prevented her from helping recently, but she is still much interested in Red Cross activities and news of nursing.

Mr. Coleman, now deceased, was a sawmill operator, raised horses and farmed, and Mrs. Coleman still owns her own home on the Red House road. With her activities curtailed because of the hip injury, she now resides at Hickory Grove. She pointed with pleasure to a dresser full of perfume, hand lotion, and other gifts from the women's circles of Liberty Baptist Church. Newest arrival from the church group is a box of candy.

Mrs. Coleman knitted 14 counterpanes while in the hospital, but now relies on her television set., visits from friends, and a daily walk on the grounds at the home to keep her occupied.

The life of the party can be the death of the party if he is allowed to do the driving.

Fisherman Lands Six Pound Bass

Ralph Harris, of Oakville, and an employee of B&W, Lynchburg, brought the proof of his fish story to the TIMES - VIRGINIAN early this week. He landed a six pound, 23 inch bass after a fishing trip to one of the county's farm ponds. A small red worm' was the lure used, along with six pound nylon test line. Harris and his family like to eat fish, but this time he says, they may mount this king-size catch.

As there was no further business the meeting was adjourned.

Gladstone Holds Sabin Clinic

The first clinic for the SOS (Sabin on Sunday) polio vaccine was given throughout Nelson County on Sunday, Sept. 8. The oral polio clinis will also be held on October 6 and November 3 in an all out effort to stamp out polio.

Inasmuch as there are three types of polio and vaccine is given for each type, type 1 will be given on Sept. 8, type 2 on Oct. 6 and type 3 on Nov. 3. The clinics will be held inthe Gladstone Fire House.

County health spokesmen say that inasmuch as one may be immunized against polio after having had Salk shots and still be a carrier of the polio virus it is important for those persons who have had the Salk shots to take the Sabine vaccine as it eliminates both dangers. Salk shots require booster shots every few years and Sabine vaccine does not.

They returned in time to partake of the 6 o'clock dinner Mrs. Payne had prepared for them.

Turtle Catcher

Jesse Arturs, 11, caught his first turtle last month but decided not to eat it. Instead a neighbor, Mrs. Mattie Garrett, dressed the turtle, and said she would be glad when he caught another one. Jesse, his mother and step-father, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Elder, Jr., were fishing in "Red" Jamerson's pond. Just a length of nylon line, a hunk of ham fat — and a hungry turtle! That's Jesse's simple formula for turtle catching!

The pistol was first manufactured in 1540 in the Italian city of Pistoia, from which it derives its name. It was a dismay weapon, with a heavy butt and a short, thick barrel, according to Collier's Encyclopedia.

Forgiveness

Lesson for September 15, 1963

The whole story of Joseph in Egypt makes one of the most fascinating tales in the world. There is not a miracle in it and yet it is more wonderful than many a story of magic, white or black. It is the story of a slave boy who rose to a throne all his own. He came just as close to being king as a man could be, and certainly wielded power not second even to that of the Pharaoh. (Pharaoh, by the way, is not a name, but a title, like King or Emperor.) There is just one point in that story which takes our attention this week: the climax of the plot, we might call it, where Joseph finally confronts his brothers face to face has those ruthless men in his power . . . and forgives them!

Love Is The Basis

What might have been a story of vengeance — evil for evil— turns out to be a story of good . . . good that is beyond most people's imagination even, returning good for evil. Joseph had never read the New Testament, and yet he acted just as if he had been reading the sermon on the mount. He has in his power the men who plotted against his life; and yet he forgives them. Why? The word "love" is not used in this story. Joseph himself may have been a sentimental man, but his biographer was certainly not. Joseph was brave, and chivalrous and loyal, but those adjectives are not used by the inspired story-teller. He doesn't have to use the word. Just try telling the story to people who never heard it before, and ask them: Why did Joseph forgive his brothers? They will probably give the natural reply: He must have loved them very much. That's very clear, isn't it? What other motive could produce such whole-hearted forgiveness? So-called forgiveness, on any other basis, isn't the real thing. Men "forgive" others, for show, or because it's demanded of them by society, or to get rid of an unpleasantness . . . but the result is coldness and aloof suspicion, not true forgiveness.

It Penetrates The Condition

But the day when Joseph forgave his brothers was not the first day he had seen them. Why didn't he forgive his brothers on sight? Why the delay? Why all that business of the state dinner, and the cup in the sack of grain? Couldn't he have forgiven his brothers right away? The reason for his waiting lay in the fact that when the brothers came to Egypt the first time, Joseph had no way of knowing what they were like now. In more than 20 years, much can happen. Had they changed or were they all the same conscienceless devils they used to be? Joseph had to find out. The Judah who so eagerly offered his life for the life of his brother Benjamin was a different man from the Judah who sold his brother Joseph into slavery. Probably the others were different too; Joseph, a good judge of character, may have seen in their faces that they sympathized and agreed with Judah. Something real, something new had entered the picture. This new thing was repentance. The meaning of that word is transformation-of-the-mind, a new way of looking at life. True repentance is not a flash of regret, it is a continuing change of heart. Without it there can be no forgiveness. Readiness to forgive, yes; but not forgiveness. Not even God offers forgiveness to those who will not repent.

If forgiveness like repentance is an inward thing, an attitude, how can we tell when it is genuine? Well, the New Testament speaks of the "fruits of repentance" and might well speak of the "fruits of forgiveness." We have good reason to believe that Judah had repented because of the way he acted about Benjamin and Jacob. We have equally good reason for being sure that Joseph really forgave his brothers, by what he proceeded to do for them. True forgiveness is not an effort to wipe off the past and leave the blackboard clean, it is not a disclaimer to destroy the germs of hate. Rather, forgiveness is positive, creative. It draws a fresh new picture of life; it brings health. The forgiver proves himself by serving those he forgives. You can never see a forgiving spirit; but you can see such a spirit in the actions it inspires.

Pastor Speaks

Pastor Says

LEADERSHIP — This is the time of the year decisions are being made with respect to leadership in religious and community life.

Church Nominating Committees are praying and seeking from among its consregation those persons whom they feel best qualified to accept certain responsibilities.

Communities have chosen, and will soon be electing those who are to lead the community in its political, social, economic, and educational life. Indeed some have already been elected, with others soon to be chosen.

What should one expect in a leader? What should a community look for in one chosen to lead in a particular relationship?

One basic thought must be remembered, that is, all leadership must be chosen from the citizenship. If low standards are developed within the constituents then you have only those to select from. If those forces within the community who set the pace for leadership are high and noble, then the chances for good leadership are higher.

Here is where the religious community plays such an important role. The church must be faithful to the highest standards of Christian development. Thus a good repertoire will be had from which to choose leadership.

Followship is one of the most important elements of leadership. Jesus said, "Whosoever will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross and follow me." Mt. 8:34. One must not act out of selfish motives. To accept places of leadership and use them for selfish interest breaks the purpose of leadership. One should not put his desires above the best interest of the people he serves.

Then, one must be willing to pay the price of serving in good conscience. One must follow the best conscience he has in Christ. Nothing should turn one aside from following right and truth. Expediency if exercised must be done with great caution. Truth must never be sacrificed for expediency. Dedication to the cause to which one is selected is a mark of leadership. A sincere belief in, and a commitment to the purpose of a particular place of leadership is necessary. Remember that no church or community will rise above its level of leadership.

It has been my unique privilege to be a part of the leadership of every community and church where I have served. Without exception in each community there have been those who have earned, in one way or the other, places of leadership. Many individuals will not make decisions without first looking to see where these leaders stand. Most of the time their decisions will be influenced by these leaders.

This places added responsibility upon leadership. Therefore those of us who accept leadership in any area must be willing to pay the price. There are burdens, crosses, misunderstanding, and conflicts that go with leadership. But there are also rewards which accompany these costs. To see an idea, or some truth come fro m the drawing board of the mind and take on flesh, blood and life in a church or community, is worth any price. To know that God is using us to fulfill His pupose is indeed a great reward. When Mary found she was to be the person whom God had chosen to be the channel throuh whom Christ was to enter this world, she sang with Joy, "My soul doth magnify the Lord": Luke 1:46. The Church and community needs the dedication of its citizenship.

We have enough "cleaners" in our world. Too many who have to depend upon the strength of others for guidance. More "lifters" are needed. Those persons who will become a part and support the one thing — the Church that creates the atmosphere out of which good leadership is produced.

Become a vital part of the church of your choice.
